THREATENED BY SUBMARINES.

Transylvania Passengers Have a Scare When Off Coast of Ireland.

London.—The Cunard liner Transylvania, which reached Glasgow Tuesday from New York, encountered a submarine off the northwest coast of Ireland about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, according to statements by passengers.

Passengers said a periscope and part of a conning tower appeared about 400 yards away and remained in sight several minutes. The ship steered a zigzag course until danger was passed.

Some passengers declared the submarine discharged a torpedo and that they saw the trail of the projectile. Others disputed this.

The Transylvania had lifeboats ready all Saturday and few passengers went to bed the last night of the voyage.
